

“Not Done Being Wrong” - written and performed by Chad Price

If I continue to pretend my love for you has disappeared,
Know that when I appear indifferent it's the only thing that seems to draw you near,
Why you respond to apathy I may not ever understand,
Truth is right before you stands a man,
A good man,
You forgot makes you feel what no-one else can,

But you'll find ways to justify all the deceit and the lies,
Convince yourself I'm not the guy,
Place the blame on everyone but you,
The mental gymnastics you do,
No there's no breaking through,
You're too far gone,
Guess you're not done being wrong,
I guess you're not done being wrong,

And although we still talk on the regular,
And sometimes beside me you'll still lay,
If I suggest we try again,
You turn and run the other way,
And I can't believe the words you speak,
No I don't know where they're coming from,
I wish I could not feel a thing,
But that kind of refuge never comes,

But you'll find ways to justify all the deceit and the lies,
Convince yourself I'm not the guy,
Place the blame on everyone but you,
The mental gymnastics you do,
No there's no breaking through,
You're too far gone,
Guess you're not done being wrong,
Yeah yeah yeah,
Yeah yeah yeah yeah yeah,
Guess you're not done being wrong,
Yeah yeah,
No no yeah,

But you'll find ways to justify all the deceit and the lies,
Convince yourself I'm not the guy,
Place the blame on everyone but you,
The mental gymnastics you do,
No there's no breaking through,
You're too far gone,
Guess you're not done being wrong,
Guess you're not done,
I guess you're not done,
